This issue's Roundup features the men's basketball team's comeback win and fencing and wrestling victories, as well as a report of the outcome of an intramural activity held for the first time last month.

The training of Taiwanese engineers in guidance systems (see The Tech, Feb. 6) was the subject of an "open forum" held on Friday. Herbert Bix, Professor of History at UMass, told the audience of about 60 that "the Taipei regime is oppressive and corrupt. It rules by police and army repression and intimidation." Howard Shrobe, a member of the Social Action Coordinating Committee, said that "we think the program is bad because it will boost one of the worst governments in the world." Shrobe said that the technology being learned "could be used for military purposes," and therefore should not be taught.

After a weak, finish in the Oklahoma Democratic caucuses, Senator Lloyd Bentsen has withdrawn from the race for the Democratic Presidential nomination. Coupled with a bad defeat two weeks ago in Mississippi, the Oklahoma setback crowded Bentsen out of the field.

Pro-Western forces in Angola have been routed from their capital city of Huambo, according to broadcasts by the Soviet-backed Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola. Observers indicate that this could mark the end of any concentrated resistance by the National Union and the National Front for the Liberation of Angola, who have been fighting the Popular Movement for control of the recently-liberated country.

In the Friday, Feb. 6, issue of The Tech, Chancellor Paul E. Gray '54 was quoted in reference to the Taiwanese guidance program as saying, "Someone either at Draper or at MIT didn't do their homework." Gray's actual statement was "Someone - either at Draper or State - didn't do their homework." The Tech regrets the error.

Shagoury still UAVP

By Gerald Radack

A misunderstanding resulted in the appointment of a replacement for UAVP Steve Shagoury '76 when Shagoury had not actually resigned.

UAP Lee Allen '77 announced the resignation of Shagoury and initiated a search for a replacement after a phone conversation with Shagoury in which Allen says he was led to believe that Shagoury was resigning.

Shagoury, however, was away from the Institute and did not know abourt his "resignation" until he happened to read about it in a copy of The Tech at his parents' house.

Because of the mixup, there will now be two UAVPs: Shagoury and Kevin Miller '77, who was appointed by Allen to "replace" Shagoury.

The Tech was unable to reach Shagoury or Miller for comment.

Allen said that a "big argument about whether Steve did or did not resign would not be productive, . . Rather than waste time fighting about it, we three got together" and agreed to have two UAVPs.

In a letter to members of the DSA office and others, Allen said that Shagoury's and Miller's "duties and responsibilities will be different," although "we have yet to work out the details."

Allen explained that "in the couple of days we've been talking about it" he and the UAVPs have just decided that work in a given area would be done by "whoever felt responsible for doing it or whoever felt like doing it."

When questioned about the constitutionality of appointing another UAVP when the elected one remained in office. Allen stated that the UA constitution did not explicitly forbid or allow it. He said he could try to convene the General Assembly to approve the nomination but "that might take all term."

February 1, 1976

Mr. Lee J. Allen, President Undergraduate Association 84 Massachusetts Avenue, Room #20-401 Cambridge, Massachusetts 02139

I was very shocked to discover that I had resigned as Undergraduate Association Vice-Fresident. I stumbled upon this news by reading the January 23, 1976 issue of The Tech on January 31, 1976 in the late afternoon in my parents' home.

Evidently, since my resignation was printed in The Tech, I must have resigned before then. But, I do not ever recall telling you or anyone either orally or in writing that I had quit or resigned as UAVF, or that I had any intention of doing so. Yet, I was given the impression in the above-mentioned article that you had some notion that I had quit or resigned as UAVP. Ferhaps we are still having a communication problem.

I have one concrete suggestion to help solve this dilemma for the good of the student body: Hold Election Day on March 10, 1976.

I have not resigned from this office, although I am now considering it in light of the above-mentioned incident.

Fund drive going well despite economy

By Mike McNamee

Despite disappointing results in some areas, the MIT Leadership Campaign is considered "going very well" by MIT officials who say the fund drive is now ready to face "its first realtests."

Those tests will come as the $225-million drive turns from organizational work among alumni, which has dominated its first year, to seeking "the big gifts that make or break a drive" from corporate and institutional donors.

"As I look around the country," Corporation Chairman and Leadership Campaign Co-Chairman Howard Johnson said recently, "I see that we're doing as well as the best of fund drives and better than most in terms of our rate of gain. We gathered $15 million through a very rough year, and that's very encouraging.'

Although more than $60 million has been received. Johnson said he was "frankly disappointed" by poor showings on many goals of the five-year drive - the most important being "bricks and mortar," funds for construction and facilities improvement. Two of the most important construction projects, new housing and the S6-million Phase I sports center improvements, have gathered almost no funds, he said.

But with the economic outlook improving and clarification of the tax situation for donors many of whom, Johnson said, had expected tax reform to make philanthropy less attractive - "1976 should be the big year for the drive."

Johnson said that timing was one of the key factors in the drive's favor. "The Corporation decided in December, 1974, that the drive would start last spring, and we announced it in April, 1975," he explained, "The timing was good - December '74 was almost the precise low point in the economy, and things have been up ever since."

Organizational efforts have consumed most of the first year of the drive, as Johnson and Co-Chairman Paul F. Hellmuth '47 worked on setting up alumni committees in 22 cities and three foreign countries - Japan, Taiwan, and Hong Kong.

Building up the staff in the Resource Planning and Development Offices has also taken some effort. Two more positions are still open on that staff, Johnson said, but they should be filled soon.

"Our staff looks very strong, and should be able to do the follow-through work" Johnson said, "I'm sure that the decision to use our own staff here, instead of using a professional fund-raising firm, will prove to be right. People ask us what percentage of their donations we're paying to some outside firm and we can say 'Not a cent'.'

The Alumni Fund, a branch of the Alumni Association, is also contributing its efforts to the drive. All donations that come in to MIT from April, 1975, to April, 1980, will be counted toward the $225 million goal.

Most of the funds raised so far, Johnson said have come in small gifts, although there have been "several" $1 million donations. "We didn't plan to go after the major gifts until this year," he said.

Donations for endowment funds added to the permanent funds of the Institute - are (Please turn to page 3)

Udall: US needs new priorities

By Marty Weinstock

"People don't believe in govemment anymore," presidential candidate Morris Udall (D-Ariz.) stated at a talk last Wednesday night.

Udall told a crowd that overflowed from the Sala de Puerto Rico into Lobdell that he was the only liberal "not campaigning against the United States." He blamed many of the country's problems on Nixon's "imperial presidency."

Udall spoke out for "a humane enlightened US foreign policy in the 1970's and 80's" and urged an ordering of priorities leading towards reductions in the defense budget.

The country should no longer try to save the world from communism, Udall said, but rather it should work towards solving the world hunger problem, ending the arms race, and decreasing the power of multinational corpora-

The candidate urged legislation regulating concentrated industries such as drugs, chemicals, steel, automobiles and oil but simultaneously urged some deregulation of railroads to eliminate wasted resources. He declared that he would try to break up the energy cartel in two years through legislation.

Starting with, "We're gonna pass a law the way they did in the 1930's...good old Theodore Roosevelt Americanism." he spoke about horizontal control - when oil companies own coal, uranium and other fuel sources - and vertical control - for instance, the energy companies supply themselves

Representative Morris Udall from wellhead through gas pumps.

Udall remarked that if people started using manure for fuel, "they would probably find out that the oil companies owned that, also."

Consumers pay through their bills for the utilities companies' experts who testify in favor of proposed rate increases, Ud. 9 noted. Therefore he recommended a $1 checkoff on consta-mers utility bills to fund a consumer advocate bureau of rate experts to testify at rate increase hearings.

Udall proposed price controls to decrease inflation and a full employment bill to fight unemployment. This would not cost as much as it appears to due to increased taxes and reduced federal welfare and unemployment expenses, Udall stated. He did not, however, elaborate on how the bill would operate. The candidate noted that he believes the full employment bill will also decrease crime as half the violent crime in America is committed by persons under 19, often unemployed.

The Arizonian expressed the opinion that President Ford uses the veto power too freely, especially since he is a "lame duck" president not given a mandate by the people. Udall's assesment of the next four years is, "We face some very difficult times but...we have...and we can do it again."

Representative Udall's talk was one of a series, "Campaign '76," sponsored by the Lecture Series Committee, "introducing MIT students to the political form of today," in the words of Lecture Director Robert Willmore, 7,7,...

> "One thing that has been a pleasant surprise is the number of people making 'unrestricted' gifts," gifts applicable to operating funds or endowment at the adminitration's choice, Johnson said. "More people than ever are saying 'put the money where you need it,' which is very useful to us."

Cagers, women fencers win

By Glenn Brownstein, Dave Dobos, and Jeannette Wing

Come-from-behind victories have been few and far between for men's basketball (5-10) the last few years. Come-from-ahead defeats have been much more prevalent, in fact. Saturday night, though, the cagers made up a seven-point deficit in the game's final four minutes to nip Clark, 78-75, and snap a four-game losing streak.

Freshman Tom Berman's two free throws with 0:14 left in the contest proved to be the gamewinners and put MIT ahead for the first time in ten minutes.

Peter Jackson scored 27 points and pulled down nine rebounds to lead the Engineers, who face Nichols tonight at 8pm in the Cage.

Junior Rich Okine's second place in the high hurdles led the indoor track (6-1-1) squad to sixth in the Greater Bostons last weekend. Okine won his preliminary and semifinal heats in 5.9, but couldn't catch BU's Tom Mahan in the finals.

Co-captain Mick Ryan '76 sped to a fourth in the 600 yard dash in 1:14.9 and Jeff Baerman 76 continued his string of excellent races, turning in a 4:15.6 mile for fourth place. Barry Bayus 779 shattered the freshnan two mile record with a sizzling 9:28.2.

To round out the MIT scoring, the two mile relay team of Jaxk Reeves '77. Bayus, Baerman, and Joe Egan '77 earned a third place with a time of 8:07.2, just four seconds off the MIT record.

The women's fencing team (4-1) added another convincing victory Saturday by upsetting Holy Cross. Co-captain Angela Chaney '76 fenced superbly, only receiving one touch against her in winning both her bouts. Judy Austin '77 and Jeannette Wing '78 each defeated two of three opponents to make the final score 6-3. The fencers meet Radcliffe at home Thursday night. Men's fencing (7-1) routed Holy Cross, 21-7.

Wrestling (8-3) defeated Williams 33-12 but lost to powerful Union, 28-14, at Williamstown, Mass. Mort Isaacson '79 (118) and Joe Scire '77 (142) both wrestled well in winning both matches, while 6'6', 330-pound Erland van Lidth de Jeude '76 picked up a couple of forfeits. The grapplers face Tufts and Boston State at MIT Saturday.

Although somewhat overmatched, women's swimming (2-6) performed well in losing to Holy Cross and Boston College. Lann Salyard '78 captured both the 50- and 100-yard backstroke events against Holy Cross, and Peggy Page '78 and captain Wendy Irving '77 also won one event each against the Crusaders.

January saw the debut of pocket billiards as an intramural sport at MIT. The Institute pool tournament drew a total of 12 teams and some 75 individuals into the competition. Both individual and team championships were awarded, each team consisting of five players. Matches were held at the participating living groups with the finals taking place at the Student Center.

Phi Beta Epsilon won the team championship with a squad of Sean O'Connor '76. Steve Schmid '77, Bill Rittman '78, Steve Jones '76, and Mike Haggerty '77 by defeating Alpha Epsilon Pi 4-1 in the finals. O'Connor took the individual honors, defeating runner-up Schmid 75-42 in the title game.
